Get out your sap buckets.

As a reminder that March is still with us, the snow flurry of today served its purpose.

It was one of the dying gasps of No. 10 license in the Town of Barre. A decent burial is being provided.

Montpelier will worry along for another year with its city officers scattered from center to circumference.

Mr. Consumer felt the coal shivers when he read today that the operators have turned their backs on the miners.

We notice that the Northern base ball league has again imposed a "salary limit" on base ball professors. They have hugged that same defusion for two years now.

After a quarter of a century of service, Supt. Wheeler of the Burlington public schools is to be benighted, politically speaking, and his friends say that he is a martyr to small politics.

Somerset should be added to the list of "wet" towns in Vermont for the coming year. The belated returns show that Somerset's eleven votes were divided in this fashion: Yes 5, No 3. There are 28 license towns so far as reported.

The South Royalton woman, who by force of her logic got the town to vote $500 for a town history, after the motion had been made to lay the matter on the table, is of the type of fighters. It was a worthy cause and her courage was worthy of it.

DR. SEAEVER'S REFUSAL.

In retorting "it's none of your business," when Attorney General Fitts tried to find out what knowledge the Rev. Dr. Norman Seaver had in relation to the state house of correction, the reverend gentleman was wrong, entirely wrong. It was very much the business of the state official to determine all that he could concerning the conduct of the state institution, and as circumstances will show, he was justified in summoning this clergyman to appear before the commission. This investigation is being conducted according to a state law, passed by the legislature of 1904, which authorized the governor to appoint "three suitable persons" to investigate the house of correction, in connection with the state prison and the state hospital for the insane. Section 2 of the enactment reads: "Said commissioners shall be sworn to the faithful performance of their duty. They are hereby empowered to summon witnesses to testify before them, and are granted the same power that justices of the peace have to compel testimony and to compel the production of books, papers, letters and writing." Section 3 of the same enactment directs the attorney general to prosecute such investigation be-

174 Main Street, Barre, Vt.

TOPICS OF THE TOWN.

During a recent frigid spell a young man, whose name is not Jones, and who does reside on South Main street, awoke one morning with a desire to learn how low the thermometer had gone. Slipping out of a warm bed and into a bath-robe and a pair of socks, he glided out of doors into the gloom of the early morn, intending to glide back again as soon as he had consulted the mercury. But he hadn't reckoned with the spring look on the door. The door shut together with a click, and the young man found himself a prisoner on the piazza.

And there he stood and stared for fifteen long minutes. The family were not only roused. The young man, crouching sheepishly up the stairs, convinced that the weather was cold. It was nine below zero.

A local grocer and a traveling man were engaged in conversation in the former's store the other day, when the latter picked up a flour bag. One thing led to another, and finally the grocer said:

"I'll bet you wouldn't put that on your back and wear it up and down the street."

"I'll bet I would," was the prompt rejoinder.

"If you do it I'll give you a sack of flour," declared the grocer.

The traveling man was game and the grocer pinned the tag on his back. During the remainder of the day the tag circulated up and down the streets. The grocer turned over the sack of flour, but still thinks that he made a good bargain, because of the advertisement.

A Barre clergyman did canvassing for books to help him through college and in the course of his work ran across many funny incidents. He was telling his experiences the other day. One of them was particularly funny. It happened in a manufacturing town in New Hampshire. Going into a home, the college student spoke to the man and woman and then began to tell the man about the merits of his book. The man heard the enthusiastic agent through and then drawled out:

"Well, I psume yer book's all right, but we don't want it."

All this time the wife of the household had been tending strictly to her ironing. Her husband and "lord" had no sooner finished his curt refusal to the college man than the wife broke in with:

"Yes, we want that book. Our name (with emphasis on the "our") is John Turner. You deliver the book and we (notice the "we") will have your money for you."

A few days later the college student delivered the book and found his pay waiting for him. The man of the house was not to be seen. He was perhaps out doing the washing.

There's a little miss in town who is more than ordinarily precocious. She has not yet seen her fourth birthday. Recently she wanted her mother to do something, which the mother did not think it best to do. After waiting what seemed a reasonable interval for her mother to accede to her request the three-year-old cocked her head on one side and enquiringly asked: "Don't you intend to give in to me?" The mother smothered a smile but didn't give in.

A local school teacher has been figuring up the distance which she travels to and from her place of occupation in the course of the year. The distance is one mile and she walks it four times every school day. That makes four miles a day. She figures that by the end of the year she will have gone over the route 730 times, making therefore 730 miles. And that does not take into consideration the number of miles she dances, snowshoes and otherwise skis away from morning to night. But this teacher is of the athletic kind and doesn't mind exercise.

CALLED TO BELLows FALLS.

Rev. Arthur P. Pratt of Chelsea, Mass., Will Accept.

Bellows Falls, March 12.—The Rev. Arthur P. Pratt of Chelsea, Mass., has been called to the First Congregational Church here. The church has been without a pastor since last September, the Rev. Jay T. Stocking having resigned then to accept a call to Newtonville, Mass.

Mr. Pratt is 33 years old. He was born in Dorchester, Mass., and is a graduate of Harvard University and of Andover Theological Seminary. He was ordained in March, 1901. In 1903 he was called to the pastorate of the Third Congregational Church of Chelsea, Mass. Since 1905 he has been supplying some of the New England pulpits.

Mr. Pratt has been particularly strong in his work among the young people. Last year he was president of the Chelsea Boys club, the enrollment of which reached 1,543; also of the district association of Sunday schools in Massachusetts.

Mr. Pratt is married, his wife being a daughter of Secretary Armstrong of the Massachusetts Y. M. C. A. executive committee.

New York, March 12.—Notice of a mass-meeting to protest against the prosecution of the men alleged to have been connected with the assassination of former Gov. Steunenberg of Idaho were distributed in New York Saturday. The call for the meeting is not signed. It reads as follows:

Prevent this murder by attending the protest mass-meeting arranged by the organized workers of this city to protest against the illegal imprisonment and intended murder of Messrs. Moyer, Hayward and other officials of the western federation of miners. The arrest of these men is a crime, and only by united action will we save their lives. Attend friends and shopmates.

The meeting is set for Tuesday at the Grand Central palace.
